Fluoridation and Fluoride Varnish Update 2015

Have you been faced with questions on fluoride and fluoridation from your patients? Do you have questions yourself about which topical fluoride is best? Is water fluoridation still inexpensive, safe and effective for reducing the burden of tooth decay for all segments of the community? Have you seen what’s on the Internet about and how organized dentistry and our partners are responding to allegations from the anti-fluoridationists?

Dr. Pollick will review the current science-based evidence that will help you answer your patients’ questions about fluoride and fluoridation and provide you with a way to communicate their safety and benefits.

Course Objectives:
1. Explain reasons for using fluoride varnish and recommending water fluoridation.
2. Describe some new and common anti-fluoridation allegations.
3. Identify credible information that counters those allegations.
4. Explain methods to question the validity of anti-fluoridation allegations.
5. Describe the updated recommendation and rationale for the optimal concentration of fluoride in drinking water for prevention of tooth decay.
6. Describe authoritative Internet and other resources on fluoride and fluoridation.

Austin City Council Candidates asked about Community Fluoridation

By Jonathon Kimes, DDS

With the Austin City Council run-off elections held in December, I thought it would be interesting to ask the candidates for their views on continued community water fluoridation. To see their answers, visit www.capitalareadental.org, and click City Council.
So here we are...back at the beginning of another New Year. It seems that it is no coincidence that the depth of the seasonal cycle is tied to this traditional transition of time because from the beginning of the New Year things naturally begin to renew. Just as the anticipated seasonal change promises renewal, so too is the promise that we can affect our preferred futures for the coming year through thoughtful planning. The rub here is that by definition we cannot get to the future by using the same means as we did in the past.

“For last year’s words belong to last year’s language.
And next year’s words await another voice.”
— TS Eliot

While the past year’s experiences and results are a valuable tool in this planning process, the future cannot be purposefully formed using the same language which formed the recent past.

As we begin 2015, it is our aim to make the CADS web site the driving force behind the changes you will see in the Capital Area Dental Society. Our intention is to make the CADS site our “voice” serving as a gateway for member interaction with our organization. We are now featuring Event Registration 24/7 for the upcoming General Meetings on the web site. In the future any event which CADS presents will use this same registration format making the process quick and easy. As the year progresses you will notice other features on the web site aimed at staying connected with our Membership on educational, regulatory, and social levels.

Speaking of education, for the first time at the January 20, 2015 CADS General Meeting we are bringing in a speaker from out of state to speak on Fluoridation, a topic on which many of us need a refresher. Dr. Howard Pollick BDS, MPH, our featured speaker, is a professor at University of California San Francisco and a Spokesperson on fluoride for the American Dental Association. Austin continues to be the focus of efforts to remove fluoride from the drinking water and all Members need to have

Dr. Shriver has been a member of the Capital Area Dental Society since he began his dental practice in Austin in 1956 and is currently one of our longest active members. Dr. Shriver was born June 4, 1931 in Eustace, TX but moved to Austin as a young child. His father graduated as a physician, but never practiced due to the circumstances of the Great Depression. Dr. Shriver graduated from Austin High School, and then joined the National Guard. A jeep accident left him bed ridden for several months before his enlistment was up, but afterwards he was able to enroll at the University of Texas where he began pursuing his career in the dental field. In his third year of undergraduate studies, Dr. Shriver was accepted to the University of Texas Dental School in Houston. He joined the United States Air Force as a dental student and was stationed in Salina, Kansas for 3 years after dental school. It was then that Dr. Shriver made his way back to Austin to begin his private practice career. He joined the practice of his wife’s cousin, Dr. Bob Dixon (past CADS president, TDA president, ADA delegate), in the office built by the Dixon family in the 1940s. In addition to his wife’s cousin, Dr. Shriver’s mother-in-law and father-in-law were also local dentists.

When asked about the things that have changed the most over his career, Dr. Shriver says that above all the new techniques and materials it’s the easier communication that comes with new technology that has had one of the biggest effects on his practice. He also says that one of the biggest changes in our Dental Society is of course its size and the loss of mentorship that accompanies this growth. When he began, there were few enough members that the new dentists would more often...

form mentoring relationships with the more experienced members. I asked Dr. Shriver to give some advice to anyone just starting their career, and he told me that he recommends starting your practice in the community that you wish to raise your family. Getting involved with a local church, the schools, and service organizations will help build your practice.

Dr. Shriver and Mrs. LeeAnn Dixon Shriver have been married for almost 65 years, with four children, six grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren. They are long-time members of Faith Presbyterian Church, and love spending time in the outdoors with their grandchildren.

DSOs and the State Board

Love them or hate them, DSOs (dental support or dental service organizations) are part of our profession, and recent action by the TSBDE looks like they will remain so for the time being. In September of 2014, the TSBDE proposed new rules (108.70 and 108.74) that would have strictly limited a dentist’s ability to work for/with a DSO. Although DSOs were not specifically mentioned, 108.70 would prohibit a dentist from entering into contract with a non-dentist for a list of non-clinical administrative operations. Proposed rule 108.74 would place full legal responsibility on an “owner-dentist” for all daily operations in the office, allowing the Board to pursue disciplinary action against the owner even if the questionable act was performed by a non-owner dentist. In essence 108.70 wouldn’t allow a dentist to contract with a DSO, and 108.74 would discourage DSOs from employing anyone due to liability. It was the opinion of many that these rules were the TSBDE’s way of crippling (if not ending) corporate dentistry in our state. After the proposed rules were published in the Texas Register, the Board received almost 400 pages of comments against the new rules as they were written. Many of these comments were from our elected officials in the State House and Senate. Jeanine Lehman, a local attorney, commented that 108.70 would have potential undesired consequences, stating, “There could be other common and beneficial contractual arrangements that are being unintentionally covered by this Rule.” The Federal Trade Commission was perhaps one of the biggest opponents of the rules, stating that, “they discourage dentists from affiliating with DSOs, and may deny consumers of dental services the benefits of competition spurred by the efficiencies that DSOs can offer.”

At the November 21, 2014 TSBDE meeting, the Board agreed to withdraw both 108.70 and 108.74 as they were written, leaving the current 108.70 in place and proposing a different version of 108.74 with less restrictive language. At press time, the newly proposed 108.74 has not been published in the Texas Register for public comment.

Many dentists in private practice, and some in corporate practice, agree that there needs to be reform in the regulation of DSOs. Many comments from our legislators point to another attempt at action in the coming legislative session, so this issue will certainly be ongoing. Check the website (www.capitalareadental.org) for the most up to date info on the rule changes.

the latest research in order to speak authoritatively on this important topic. Registering online for the January 20 General meeting at www.capitalareadental.org will allow access to Dr. Pollick’s handouts for the lecture which you will be able to follow on your device in real time. Additionally, development is underway on a new section of the CADS web site dedicated to fluoride education for members and the public alike. Regulatory issues continue to emerge on the national and state levels. Issues such as HIPPA, OSHA, Informed Consent, sedation, new drug schedule classification, and dental assistant registration (to name just a few) require all dentists to understand how these regulations affect our practices. In the next year the CADS will develop a section on our web site to serve as a gateway to all things regulatory. Members will be able to use this section as a resource to find definitive information about regulations affecting our practices.

This year will see the natural integration of our existing “CADS Culture” with Social Media. Visitors and speakers at our General Meetings always remark about the lively discussion, the camaraderie, and the high attendance. Our New Dentist Committee and the activities they organize (see New Dentist Corner at www.capitalareadental.org) are regarded as the best of any component in the state. And our Capital Area Dental Foundation (www.capitalareadentalfoundation.org) is without peer among state dental components on the issue of local access to dental care for the underserved in our community. In the coming year we will see a steady, layered approach to innovatively using Social Media to communicate the special “culture” we enjoy in the Capital Area Dental Society.

We all understand how technology has impacted our practices. The Capital Area Dental Society is no different. In 2015 and beyond the “voice” of the Capital Area Dental Society will increasingly come from our online presence. We are striving to find that “voice” which honors the lessons and experiences of the past while simultaneously becoming open to change and new ways of connecting to our preferred future.

Dear Friends:

The news is out and I couldn’t be more proud to report that the Capital Area Dental Foundation was awarded the Greenlights Nonprofit of the Year in the medium size organization category.

This tremendous honor is a direct reflection of the Capital Area Dental Society’s commitment to charitable dental care. We would not have earned this prestigious award without volunteer dentists stepping up to be a part of helping change lives through better oral health and for that, we thank you and we share this award with you and your staff.

On behalf of the CADF Board of Directors, I would like to offer a special thanks to Greenlights for sponsoring this award program, to our partner Goodwill Central Texas for submitting a letter of support of our organization and to the St. David’s Foundation for sponsoring our award.

In addition to a $2,000 cash award, CADF has received excellent media coverage. We hope to continue to raise awareness about our mission and the important work that still needs to be done to expand access to oral health care to people in our community who are in need.

Please become a part of CADF and volunteer to make a difference in someone’s life! For more information about volunteering or making a donation to the cause, please contact Kristen Whaley, CADF Program Director, at k.whaley@capitalareadentalfoundation.org or 512-992-1217. One of the most common pitfalls of equipment maintenance is also one of the easiest things to address. Compromising the time and effort for preventative handpiece maintenance can lead to expensive repairs. It is important to use the manufacturers recommended cleaning instructions and products so the warranty is not voided. The purpose of internal handpiece maintenance is to dissolve and remove dirt, debris, and contaminated oils, leaving clean oil behind for lubrication. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) guidelines call for flushing water through the handpiece in the operatory for 30 seconds to remove potential contaminants from the internal water line after each use. Handpiece maintenance stations have also gained popularity. They allow the handpiece to be housed in a unit with a cover while running the handpiece to prevent lubricant from expelling on the operator’s hands.

Twelve tips to extend the life of your handpiece:

1. A handpiece should never be wiped down with a chemical disinfectant. When heated, the chemicals may react with the metal shell causing a buildup and corrosion. If left unattended, they will shorten the lifespan of the instrument.
2. Apply a sufficient amount of cleaner/lubricant. The cleaner/lubricant should come out of the head of the handpiece to ensure all bearings have been thoroughly covered with the lubricant.
3. Make sure you are lubricating the drive air line. Only the drive air hole goes to the turbine. Lubricating the wrong line will result in improper turbine lubrication.
4. Use the correct cleaner/lubricant. Always use the manufacturer’s recommended lubricant with their respective nozzles and couplers/adapters.
5. Properly clean the chuck to remove any excess debris at least once a week to maintain the mechanism that holds the bur. This helps ensure the bur does not come out during a procedure.

6. Never place the handpiece in the ultrasonic cleaner, unless the manufacturer has a recommended product. The handpiece should never be immersed in any liquid as damage may occur.

7. Properly clean the fiber optic/LED lens. After use it is important to run under water and gently wipe with a sponge to remove all outer debris. Failure to do this will result in a buildup on the lens and poor light quality. You may also use a cotton swab dampened with isopropyl alcohol to remove debris.

8. Unless the handpiece utilizes a wrench-activated chuck, remove the bur when cleaning and lubricating and expelling. Leaving the bur in the chuck while lubricating prevents the lubricant from flowing where it needs to go to ensure proper coverage of the bearings. Always remove all burs prior to sterilization. In the autoclave, the springs in the chuck are compressed. The heat will cause these compressed springs to weaken under tension. Debris can also accumulate around the chuck, causing it to corrode and shorten the life of the instrument.

9. Expel excess lubricant by running the handpiece after lubricating and before autoclaving. If the handpiece isn’t run to expel the lubricant, it can cause a gumming effect around the turbine where it will be essentially baked in. Many times this will cause the expulsion of excess lubricant when used for the first time after autoclaving.

10. Let the handpiece cool down. Never run the handpiece under cold water to quickly cool it off. This damages the turbine.

11. It is important to follow the manufacturer’s guidelines on air pressure. Excessive air pressure could cause damage to the turbine bearings.

12. Always maintain a properly working autoclave.
